thousands of studies have been conducted by social scientists in the villages and islands and increasingly in the towns of the Pacific despite this there are few longitudinal studies of any great depth and sophistication in the region the contributors to this book have all conducted long term research in the islands of the Pacific during their visits and revisits they have witnessed first hand the many changes that have occurred in their fieldsites as well as observing elements of continuity they bring to their accounts a sense of their surprise at some of the unexpected elements of stability and of transformation the authors take a range of disciplinary approaches particularly geography and anthropology and their contributions reflect their deep knowledge of Pacific places some first visited more than 40 years ago many of the chapters focus on aspects of socio economic change and continuity while others focus on specific issues such as the impact of both internal and international migration political and cultural change technological innovation and the experiences of children and youth by focusing on both change and continuity this collection of 11 case studies shows the complex relationships between pacific societies and processes of modernity and globalisation by using a long term lens on particular places the authors are able to draw out the subtleties of change and its impacts while also paying attention to what in the contemporary pacific has been left remarkably unchanged filling a gap in the studies of the pacific region this book will appeal to an interdisciplinary audience in the fields of anthropology development geography and asia pacific studies numerous issues face pacific states trying to find their way in the early 21st century countries are striving to secure the benefits of modernisation governance law and order are needed to reach such a goal but development cannot be at the price of culture or the environment the question of how to develop and maintain sound legal systems and legal rules whilst maintaining the unique cultural heritages within the pacific is a challenge with no easy answer this interdisciplinary collection locates issues of law and governance within the particular socio political context of the pacific island region presenting sociological anthropological and political insights alongside jurisprudential analysis key issues including corruption the role of customary law in modern legal systems the place of human rights in the pacific environmental issues and the structure of the state are explored from a variety of perspectives this volume brings together a set of key articles from the last 30 years pertaining to the environmental history of the pacific basin it aims to treat the islands and waters of the pacific as well as the lands around the rim from new zealand to japan to california to chile and is the first work of environmental history to take this inclusive view of the pacific basin the focus is mainly on recent centuries but as environmental history requires at times the work also takes the very long view of millennia several of the articles seek to bring a broad pacific perspective to bear on their subjects while others use pacific basin examples to try to establish broader theoretical points of interest to all who are drawn to the study of the interactions between nature and culture the book includes a bibliography of pacific basin environmental history and an introduction that aims to sketch the contours and possible future directions of the field presenting the history of the inhabitants of the pacific islands from first colonization until the spread of european colonial rule in the later 19th century this volume focuses specifically on pacific islander european interactions from the perspective of pacific islanders themselves a number of recorded traditions are reproduced as well as articles by pacific island scholars working within the academy the nature of pacific history as a sub discipline is presented through a sample of key articles from the 1890s until the present that represent the historical evolution of the field and its multidisciplinary nature the volume reflects on how the indigenous inhabitants of the pacific islands have a history as dynamic and complex as that of literate societies and one that is more retrievable through multidisciplinary approaches than often realized contributors explore the complex relations among pacific artists patrons collectors and museums over time as well as the different meanings given to art objects by each the broad arc of islands north of australia that extends from indonesia east towards the central pacific is home to a set of human populations whose concentration of diversity is unequaled elsewhere approximately 20 of the worlds languages are spoken here and the biological and genetic heterogeneity among the groups is extraordinary anthropologist w w howells once declared diversity in the region so protean as to defy analysis however this book can now claim considerable success in describing and understanding the origins of the genetic and linguistic variation there in order to cut through this biological knot the authors have applied a comprehensive battery of genetic analyses to an intensively sampled set of populations and have subjected these and complementary linguistic data to a variety of phylogenetic analyses this has revealed a number of heretofore unknown ancient pleistocene genetic variants that are only found in these island populations and has also identified the genetic footprints of more recent migrants from southeast asia who were the ancestors of the polynesians the book lays out the very complex structure of the variation within and among the islands in this relatively small region and a number of explanatory models are tested to see which best account for the observed pattern of genetic variation here the results suggest that a number of commonly used models of evolutionary divergence are overly simple in their assumptions and that often human diversity has accumulated in very complex ways compilation of essays on the effect of technological change and social change on the human geography and physical geography of pacific includes papers on the human settlement of the islands trade development labour force recruitment the impact of mining and commercial agriculture land tenure the indigenous peoples trade and plantations urbanization etc bibliographys at the end of each essay maps references and statistical tables pacific ethnomathematics is a reference work that will be welcomed by pacific scholars engaged in a wide range of disciplines among them history anthropology education geography astronomy archaeology ethnic studies and art jacket includes book reviews and bibliographies as new nations emerge and struggle to emerge in the pacific islands region political change is everywhere marked by efforts to reconceptualize identities histories and futures in the midst of these transformations this volume brings together a diverse range of analysis and commentary that challenge tired and simplistic paradigms of area study and urge us to rethink the ways we imagine and represent the pacific this volume lays the physical and conceptual groundwork for the pacific world series exploring both the constraints imposed and the opportunities offered to humanity by the physical environment of the pacific region organized from the perspectives of big history and macro geography the volume presents a series of major studies and surveys by authors from a range of disciplines opening with perspectives on the ocean the purview expands to include geology oceanography climatology and biogeography in closing the volume examines questions of human settlement diffusion and trans pacific contacts
